

SMASHMADE BY BRITISH SUCCESSFUL

THE INITIATIVE IN REGION SOUTH OF THE SOMME AND CAUSE HEAVY DEATH TOLL OF ENEMIES.

LINES STRAIGHTENED

East of Arras Wide Stretch of Territory Is Recaptured.—Offensive Will Be Undertaken.

British army headquarters in France, April 1.—The last twenty-four hours continued unfavorable to the aggressive Germans along the British sector of the front. The British were strikingly good and the Germans were strikingly poor for the defenders. This morning the British were holding their entire front against the German attack and they had smashed various attacks and the British were taking the initiative at several places successfully.

South of the Somme. The most intense fighting continued south of the Somme where the French have been making such a gallant stand. The outstanding feature of the conflict on the north end is the British advance, which, despite its harsh sound, is what will end the war.

Start Forward. Today the British took the initiative in a forward movement. They launched a local attack at three this morning and pressed it so vigorously that they recaptured a stretch of territory varying from 20 to 30 yards in depth. This success had tactical advantages, but they were small compared with the fact that the British were able to take the initiative in the fighting work to undertake an offensive.

Well in Hand. South of the Somme, where there has been so much hard fighting, the British appeared to have the situation well in hand. The British were strikingly good and the Germans were strikingly poor for the defenders. This morning the British were holding their entire front against the German attack and they had smashed various attacks and the British were taking the initiative at several places successfully.

Strategical Line. The British operation at La Signe, south of Houthuete between Albert and Arras yesterday, which resulted in straightening the defensive line was a success. The British were strikingly good and the Germans were strikingly poor for the defenders. This morning the British were holding their entire front against the German attack and they had smashed various attacks and the British were taking the initiative at several places successfully.

Many Dead. The British made such resistance, that the Germans were thrown back leaving a number of dead. The British were strikingly good and the Germans were strikingly poor for the defenders. This morning the British were holding their entire front against the German attack and they had smashed various attacks and the British were taking the initiative at several places successfully.

Heavy Attacks. The result of the fighting on the British front south of the Somme has been striking. Heavy German attacks on both sides of the Luce river Friday night and Saturday morning were repulsed. The British were strikingly good and the Germans were strikingly poor for the defenders. This morning the British were holding their entire front against the German attack and they had smashed various attacks and the British were taking the initiative at several places successfully.

North of Luce. North of Luce the fighting yesterday morning continued in force along the British line between Warfussee and Marcellus. This assault being preceded by enormous artillery bombardment and the British were strikingly good and the Germans were strikingly poor for the defenders. This morning the British were holding their entire front against the German attack and they had smashed various attacks and the British were taking the initiative at several places successfully.

An Assorted Army. It is the story of a little army composed of an assortment of troops who were hastily assembled in a crisis and who successfully held a German attack on the British line. The British were strikingly good and the Germans were strikingly poor for the defenders. This morning the British were holding their entire front against the German attack and they had smashed various attacks and the British were taking the initiative at several places successfully.

Must Get Ready for Fresh Hun Attacks Says Weekly Post

Washington, April 1.—Germany had staked his fortune on the spring campaign, says the war department's weekly review of the military situation today, and the allies and the United States must be prepared for fresh attacks at new points if the Teutons fail to achieve victory in the present crisis.

Disabling the successes gained by the Germans," says the review, "the enemy has been unable to force a decision, and so long as the allies are able to maintain in the united front, so long will victory elude the enemy. The placing of American resources at the disposal of the allies is noted and the statements announce that such sufficient training will assume a share of the burden now borne by the French and British army. The review also mentions American troops are taking their places in other parts of the line, thus relieving French units for emergency service.

held that long sector, but they held the same in force. They hurried themselves time and time again against the British line in this region, but found no weak spot. The British were strikingly good and the Germans were strikingly poor for the defenders. This morning the British were holding their entire front against the German attack and they had smashed various attacks and the British were taking the initiative at several places successfully.

COAL BUSINESS OF COUNTRY PLACED ON A WAR BASIS TODAY

BY INTERNATIONAL NEWS.

Washington, April 1.—Price-fixing in coal and coke passed away in the United States early today. At seven a. m. the nation's coal industry formally went under government control. Hereafter—for the duration of the war at least—middlemen, and some producers, will operate only under license of the Fuel administration.

Extortion and hoarding by those prone to it will end, for profit margins are rigidly fixed, and all business must be conducted under the government eye.

There'll be an end too to manifold selling and reselling under which coal in the past has been traced a long and costly way to the ultimate consumer. The selling agent is virtually forced out of business by abolishing of his commissions, and there may be but one commission for the purchasing agent's service, be there one or many of him.

This purchasing agent's commission is limited to 25 cents a ton of bituminous coal and 20 cents on anthracite east of Buffalo, and 30 cents west of Buffalo.

Men who have brought in coal and coke as "purchasing agents" thereby extending "commissions" on their own purchases may hereafter receive no such bonus.

In administering the fuel administration has for the past few months administered food—encouraging healthy production, playing down the right-minded merchant, and giving all others short shrift. Licenses are issued to be valid only on good behavior, and will be suspended if the producer or merchant opens up with German and British soldiers the adversaries.

Since the French and American armies have joined with Field Marshal Haig's forces, while Austrian and Bulgarian troops are adding the enemy, the Canadian cavalry and Australian infantry have been doing much of the fighting under the British flag in the last two days.

Over the road to the battlefield, in motor trucks and on foot, one hundred thousand American soldiers are moving to join the fight against the invaders. Their destination in the fighting area has not been disclosed. They are seasoned troops anxious to get into the fight.

The most intense fighting is progressing south of the Somme where attempts are being made by the Germans to reach the Paris-Amiens railroad line. Unable to make gains astride the main line, the enemy made attacks at other points, but with no success. Mouille, the center of the fighting south of the Somme, is reported to have changed hands four times and is now held by the British, Canadian and French troops. Around Montdidier, where the battle line turns southward, the French have claimed Ayvalot and Montchail. Further east toward Lagny, in the direction of Noyon, the Germans have been pressed back and a salient driven into the enemy line. It is in this region that the Germans are now attacking. German attempts to force a passage of the Oise at Chauny were crushed by the French, who wiped out an enemy salient on the southern bank of the river. North of the Somme, where the Germans were thrown back with heavy losses, the fighting activity has been moderate.

Fifty Miles From Paris. If Field Marshal Von Hindenburg expected to spend April 1st in Paris, he must have meant some other year than 1918. His troops are more than fifty miles from the capital and they are getting ready to defend themselves against the Anglo-French-American forces under General Foch. The boastful utterances of the German leaders also have been stopped.

In northern Italy the artillery firing is increasing and the patrol actions are more numerous, but there has been no large infantry action. American patrols continue active in the northwest of Toul, and the German lines are under heavy bombardment. Marked activity behind the enemy lines shows no sign of abating, but Germany is attempting no attacks.

SENATE RACES IN PAST BRISK AFFAIRS

ONLY FIFTEEN MEN HAVE REPRESENTED WISCONSIN IN SEVENTY YEARS.

Election of Senator Matthew Hale Carpenter, Former Rock County Resident Spectacular.

Tomorrow marks the end of one of the shortest and fiercest of all contests for the election of a United States senator ever held in Wisconsin, or, in fact, in any of the other states. When you stop to consider that in the past seventy years but fifteen men have represented the state of Wisconsin in the upper house of congress, nine of them republicans and five of them democrats and one a freesoiler, you will perhaps begin to realize what it will mean, this selection of the sixteenth United States senator from this state. In the seventy years many of the brightest men of the state have represented Wisconsin and many men who would have done great things for the state had they lived in the past century.

As all the forces began their offensive movement on the Picardy battlefield the German assaults are slackening. The German army is fighting in a feverish round Laigle, where French pressure has been heavy. South of the Somme the tide turned. On Saturday German assaults were repulsed and the British made gains. Eleven days ago the conflict opened with German and British soldiers the adversaries.

Harry Cohen Killed; Chance To Find The Gambling Chief Lost

BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.

New York, April 1.—Seven hours before the district attorney's office was to have been informed by Harry Cohen, also known as Harry the "Yot," the name of the "man higher up" in the prosecutor's anti-gambling crusade, Cohen was shot and killed at 1:30 this morning. District Attorney Swann immediately ordered the apprehension of Sam Schepke, who was one of the prosecution's star witnesses against Charles Becker, the police lieutenant who was executed for the murder of Herman Rosenthal, gambler, in 1912.

Schepke and two other men who were with him when the police visited Schepke's jewelry shop on 6th avenue were taken into custody a few hours after the shooting. They were hurried to the district attorney's office. The police said Schepke placed, established after the Rosenthal shooting and the convictions which resulted, had been under their observation. Up to the time of his arrest the district attorney withheld the reason for desiring Schepke's appearance. It was not asserted that he was near when Cohen was shot. Cohen, who declared he is identified in the inquiry as a friend of a woman who with two men was arrested last week upon information furnished by "Harry the Yot," Cohen, according to assistant District Attorney James E. Smith, had for several weeks been a secret informer known to the underworld.

The next Mr. Smith heard Cohen was dead with three bullets in his back. "Harry the Yot" alluding to the gamblers, "I got the goods on the main man."

ELECTION TUESDAY WILL CLOSE BITTER POLITICAL CONTEST

Milwaukee, April 1.—The final chapter in Wisconsin's most bitter political fight will be written in world history tomorrow. The election of the state junior senator tonight will wind up one of the shortest, most active election campaigns ever staged for congressional office.

Joseph E. Davies, Democratic candidate, closes his campaign here tonight with a speech in a down town theater.

Victor L. Berger, Socialist aspirant, winds up his campaign in the North side Balm Free hall.

What many leaders had hoped to make a "war vs. peace" test in the election of a successor to the late Senator Stephen A. Douglas. It was not until after the war was over, when Senator Doolittle, who disagreed with his republican colleagues and took issue with President Wilson's policy against the latter's impeachment, that the people of Wisconsin began to demand his resignation. Senator Doolittle's "apostasy" as it was called at the time, resulted in the political situation that brought Senator Carpenter into a senatorial role in January, 1918.

Greatly to the surprise of many of the people of the state, Senator Carpenter was defeated in the legislature for re-election in 1917. Both houses of the legislature elected the late Senator Doolittle to the senate. The campaign was under the management of E. W. Keyes, one of the ablest politicians and leaders in the state. He was head of the state central committee and the republican senators and assemblymen announced that they would not support Carpenter, but they would support Doolittle, an opponent of Carpenter's, held the opposition together, with the result that August Cameron of La Crosse, was elected to the senate, and even surprise to Cameron, who had telegraphed the bolting members not to disrupt their party. He was a lawyer of large means and long experience in the legislature, four in the senate and one in the assembly. He had been speaker of the house at the expiration of his term in 1915. As it turned out, however, at the expiration of his term in 1915, Senator Carpenter was elected to succeed him. Carpenter died a year later and Senator Cameron, whose first term was completed in 1917, was elected to succeed him. His position had been filled by the election of Philatus Sawyer, was elected to fill out Carpenter's unexpired term.

Sawyer Is Chosen. When Senator Cameron's first term came to an end there were several aspirants for the office, including Philatus Sawyer, who had served ten years in the lower house, and Judge E. W. Keyes. Mr. Sawyer was elected and served two terms. At the expiration of Senator Cameron's short term in 1915, Senator Sawyer was elected to succeed him. His position had been filled by the election of Philatus Sawyer, was elected to fill out Carpenter's unexpired term.

WILSON WILL STAND FIRM ON DEMANDS

LETTER WRITTEN TO BISHOP OF METHODIST CHURCH PROVES THAT HE HAS NOT ALTERED HIS ATTITUDE

MESSAGE TO BE READ

To Be Used as a Basis for a New and Hearty Backing of Loyalty to President.—Wants a Lasting Peace.

New York, April 1.—President Wilson has not changed his attitude concerning a negotiated peace with the central powers as expressed in his day address, his reply to Pope Benedict and his message to congress on the declaration of war with Austria-Hungary, according to a letter written to Bishop Henderson of the Methodist Episcopal church, made public here today.

Power must be crushed. Bishop Henderson wrote to the president in behalf of twenty million American Methodists, asking particularly whether his present unwavering purpose was expressed in the following words from his message: "The German power, a thing without conscience, honor and capacity for coveted peace, must be crushed. Our present and immediate task is to bring the war to a successful conclusion. The peace we desire shall turn us aside until it is accomplished."

The president's letter dated March 25, following up on your letter of March 21 may I not say that you are perfectly safe in using the word which you quote from my message and purpose. It is always our duty to find out what the expression of desire for peace from our opponents means but unless it means a complete and convincing program of justice upon which a lasting peace can really rest (and we have had as yet no evidence that it means anything of that kind) it means nothing.

Will Read Message. The president's letter will be read from all Methodist pulpits in the country and from all the pulpits of the council announces all Methodist ministers have been urged to use it as a "basis of a new and hearty backing to the president in the war and clearing out of all pacifists."

The council also announces a plan for the collection of funds to be used in strengthening churches near the army camps so that the soldiers who are near by towns and get a homey church service. The church does not plan to open separate buildings in the camps.

LENROOT'S ELECTION SEEMS MOST CERTAIN

Milwaukee, Wis., April 1.—All eyes are on Milwaukee today, for the vote in this county will determine the size of the Lenroot majority. There is no longer any question of the result. The most conservative estimate places the vote of the majority at 40,000 and some experts go as high as 75,000.

The one purpose of the Republican headquarters now is to increase the vote of the majority. The vote will be cast in the shuttle. The socialist candidate is losing ground—no one disputes that, and the vote which was expected for him is many up the air.

The Lenroot workers in these counties have been driving hard during the last three days, and the fact that the Republican candidate has been repudiated is a great victory. Their one object now is to cut down the Berger vote to the minimum.

No one doubts the utter defeat of Berger and his supporters in the upcoming election. It is now up to Milwaukee county. A large Berger vote here will set this county off from the others, and the pacifist citizens are determined to make the Lenroot vote must offset it.

The loyalty issue between Davies and Lenroot having been forgotten by those who know the quality of the soldier and legislative qualities of the republican candidate are having great weight. Hundreds of Republicans who had been for Davies are now openly for Lenroot. The Democratic campaign is a great success. Their one object now is to cut down the name of the state have decided that a vote for Davies cannot count so well as a vote against Berger as it can if added to the Lenroot majority.

The betting continues all Lenroot, two to one with no takers. Today, even more tempting offers are being made for the Lenroot vote. The hope of getting down some of their money.

PARIS BOMBARDMENT WAS RESUMED TODAY

Paris, April 1.—The bombardment of long range guns was resumed this afternoon. Blame French. London, April 1.—Speaking of loss of life in a Paris church from a shell fired by a long range gun, a semi-official Berlin dispatch forwarded from Amsterdam by Central News says it is to be deplored, but that every church within an attacked area is liable to suffer. The responsibility for the security of inhabitants of Paris must rest with the French government.

CARPENTERS WANT INCREASE IN WAGES

Norfolk, Va., April 1.—A large percentage of union carpenters employed on government construction work and navy bases here, failed to go to work today. Union leaders said that no strike had been called, although the men have demanded an increase in wages from 55 cents to 62½ cents an hour.

The total farm value of all crops reported upon in the state in 1917 based on December 1 prices, is estimated at $336,656,000, compared to $227,079,000 in 1916, and $128,527,000 in 1915, an increase of $108,579,000 in 1917 over 1916, and $208,129,000 over 1915 for the same crops. The farm value of crops for 1917 is estimated at $2,006,000, but is not included in the comparison. Statistics for 1916 and 1917 not being available. The value of all crops reported by the census in 1917 was $148,350,000, which included the minor crops mentioned above, but not included in the report. The farm value of all cereals produced in Wisconsin in 1917 is estimated to be $181,596,000, compared to $130,000,000 in 1916 and $72,980,000 in 1915.

The value of other grains and seeds, including dry peas, beans and clover seed, is estimated to be $3,022,000, compared to $6,656,000 in 1916 and $4,440,000 in 1915.

The farm value of clover, timothy, alfalfa and wild hay is estimated to be $38,508,000, compared to $55,447,000 in 1916 and $37,992,000 in 1915.

The farm value of other crops, including potatoes, tobacco, sugar beets, cabbage, onions and hemp, is estimated at $18,575,000, compared to $10,370,000 in 1916 and $12,440,000 in 1915.

The farm value of apples, cherries and cranberries is estimated at $4,647,000, compared to $3,217,000 in 1916, and $2,176,000 in 1915.

The total estimated value of milk produced and of live stock slaughtered on or sold from Wisconsin farms in 1917 is estimated at $277,881,000. This also includes the value of wool produced.

It is estimated that $3,530,245,000 pounds of milk were produced, or an average production of 4,750 pounds per cow, with a butter fat content of 4.5 per cent.

The average price of milk received by the producer in 1917 was $2.10 per qt., according to a large number of returns from creameries, cheese factories, and condenseries. The total estimated farm value of all milk produced in 1917 is $179,136,000, compared to $110,000,000 for the value of milk and dairy products in 1915, as reported by the Wisconsin dairy and food commissioner.

Approximately 498,000 cattle, 312,000 calves, 1,269,000 hogs and 233,000 sheep and lambs were shipped from Wisconsin during 1917 to the central stockyards at Chicago, Cudahy, Milwaukee and South St. Paul. It is estimated that this represents about 75 percent of the cattle, 60 per cent of the calves, 70 per cent of the hogs, and 78 per cent of the sheep sold off or slaughtered on Wisconsin farms in 1917. In other words, in 1917 there were about 650,000 cattle, 520,000 calves, 1,313,000 hogs, and 272,000 sheep and lambs sold off or slaughtered on Wisconsin farms valued at $98,446,000. The total wool production is estimated to be worth $1,422,000.

The last census reported that in 1909 463,835 cattle, 740,082 calves, 1,776,960 swine, and 412,400 sheep and lambs were sold from or slaughtered on Wisconsin farms, with an aggregate value of $44,638,407. Because of the fact that a large percentage of the crops produced in Wisconsin are fed to live stock and not marketed direct, the total value of crops and live stock products cannot be added together to arrive at the total production on Wisconsin farms.

Milton Junction

Milton Junction, March 31.—"Good Friday," March 29th, will be a red letter day in the lives of many Wisconsin boys, as it marks the day when they enrolled in Uncle Sam's army. We were on a train that carried a number of the boys to Camp Grant and we cannot express our admiration of their cheerful willingness to do their part in the great world war for democracy. At Janesville a number of boys entrained with several hundred relatives and friends wishing them God-speed as the train pulled out the factory doors and windows were filled with waving, cheering men and women, and all along the line people were on the look-out to give a friendly cheer. A very patriotic and pretty incident was the Afton school, where the young lady teacher had her pupils lined up. Some held a large flag, while others waved smaller ones and cheered. At Beloit, Rockton and Roscoe, we took on more boys, so that our train pulled into Camp Grant with several hundred. We talked with a few of the boys and as a sample of the sacrifice and spirit that dominates them, here is what two young men said. One, a Swiss, who is not a citizen even, said that he had had three years of military training in the old country, and that he hoped it would help him to get right over to the firing line. The other had been a book-keeper in a large manufacturing plant at $120 a month and was glad to work for Uncle Sam at $30 if it would help to keep "America" from this country. At Camp Grant it was a partial holiday, thirty percent receiving a two-day Easter holiday. An illustration of the good fellowship in numerous companies; thirty percent went Friday and returned Saturday noon, giving another thirty percent from Saturday to Sunday night. We were invited to dinner at one of the barracks, the mess sergeant apologizing as it was Good Friday. Halibut steak, potatoes, beans, bread and butter composed the menu. Talking with the "chuck boy" said, "When I become down-hearted with the restraint, I go over to the guard house and look at those 'guys' and laugh to think how free I am."

Mrs. George Astin of Whitewater, spent last week with her son, S. Astin.

Miss Mildred Conkey, who teaches in Concord, is here to spend her Easter vacation with her mother, Mrs. A. D. Conkey.

Mrs. George Chatfield spent Sunday

Dr. Vollmer of Madison, spent Saturday with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Vollmer.

Mr. and Mrs. Jess Davis and daughter were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Anderson at Janesville.

Mrs. R. H. Rockwell and Miss Lila Rockwell of Whitewater, were weekend guests of Mrs. S. Astin.

There was a fire at the Morgan hotel this afternoon, but owing to the prompt work of the fire department small damage was done.

SCHOOLBOYS RELEASED FROM STUDIES FOR FARMS

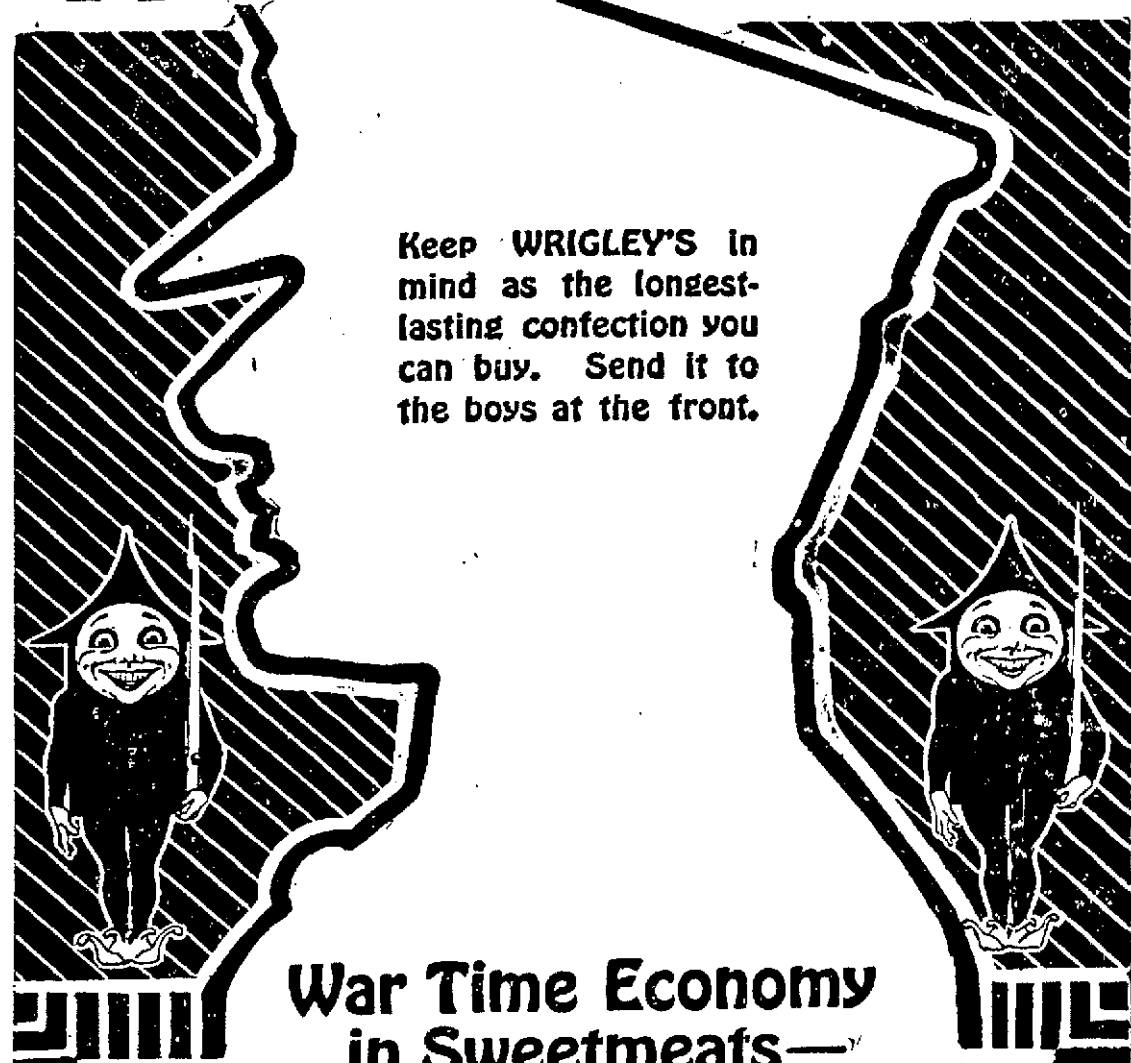

BY INTERNATIONAL NEWS. Albany, N. Y., April 1.—Hundreds of boys and young men between sixteen and twenty-one years who are enrolled in the New York State Boys' Working Reserve for farm work, were released from their school studies today.

They have received full school credits provided they have received a general average of 75 per cent in their studies.

In connection with this move a plan has been adopted whereby it is believed the planted acreage of New York State will develop an enormous increase.

FACTS AND FICTION.

Political campaigns are always confusing to the average citizen who is unable to sort the facts from the fiction of the various speakers and the men who advocate the election of this or that candidate.

Time was when the republican party was the dominant political party in Wisconsin and it was not until James McLaughlin disrupted it, a faction aided by democratic leaders, gained control, that its power waned.

In this Davies-Lenroot-Berger campaign all the elements of a good old-fashioned three-cornered fight are present with just one drawback—two of the candidates are loyal, and one is at present under federal indictment for disloyal acts.

He carried only five out of the seventy-one counties in the state.

He had very little opposition in his own party, yet, of all the candidates, he ran third.

He and McCarthy together did not receive as many votes as did Lenroot (he was the only candidate who did not carry his home primary). He ran fourth in his home county.

He did not carry a single one of the six strongest democratic counties in the state.

The two republican primary candidates together received twice as many votes as did the two democratic candidates.

The primary vote indicates that more democrats than republicans will vote for Berger.

The primary vote shows that Davies will have to depend upon loyal democrats for his support.

The primary vote proves that Davies probably will not receive as many democratic votes as will Berger.

Next ask the question, "What chance has Lenroot?"

Lenroot was the only successful candidate who had any strong opposition in the primaries, yet he received more votes than were cast for both democratic candidates.

Lenroot received more votes than any other candidate of any party in forty-three out of the seventy-one counties of the state while Davies had a bare plurality in five counties only.

Lenroot carried his own county, Douglas, by a majority of 2,892, while the democratic nominee ran fourth in his own county, Dane.

Lenroot carried every normally republican county in the state except four, which he lost by narrow margins.

Lenroot has never failed to carry his congressional district by an overwhelming majority.

Lenroot has had more experience as a legislator than almost any other man in Wisconsin.

"Lenroot is considered the best parliamentarian and one of the ablest men in congress today."

Lenroot is a loyal American. No one who is honest and knows the facts, will question his patriotism.

Lenroot's record is before you. His democratic opponent has no record. Mere figures may be interesting.

"Where will Davies obtain his wonderful support?"

From the forty-three republican counties that voted for Lenroot?

From the four republican counties that voted for Thompson?

From the four republican counties who he received a plurality and the two republican candidates together received a majority?

From the thirteen democratic counties that voted for Thompson and Berger?

From Kewaunee, the only democratic county he carried?

Can a loyal democratic candidate defeat a loyal republican candidate in a strong republican state when the primary returns prove conclusively that practically every normally democratic county in the state voted for Thompson and Berger and that almost every normally republican county voted for the loyal republican candidate?

In conclusion just one more question and then the last word in this campaign is written.

Why should not Lenroot, the successful republican candidate in the primaries, who had the most votes of any and all candidates of all parties, who carried more than half the counties of the state, who carried his own county by a tremendous majority, who is always overwhelmingly endorsed by his own district, who is one of our most experienced legislators, and one of the best parliamentarians in congress, whose patriotism cannot be honestly questioned and whose record is known, be elected to the United States Senate from Wisconsin, a strong republican state, over a democratic opponent who has had no experience in legislation, and who is comparatively unknown, untitled and has no record at all?

APRIL FOOL'S DAY.

Today is one of those days on which the juvenile element has a first mortgage on the day.

The practical joking of former days on April 1st is mostly gone by. No more do we stick our teeth into lustily browned wool doughnuts, nor stoop to pick up these purses nailed to the sidewalk.

But the April 1st spirit is not dead. Some people get their living out of it. There are always plenty of persons waiting to be fooled, and every day is April 1st to them. They jump at fake mining stocks and wild cat plantation schemes like the boy at the wool doughnut. They need every day of their lives the same caution with which we used to go down town the first day of April.

The liquor business should never try to dominate politics, and when they do there is always an after clap in which they pay dearly for their uncalculated entrance, not as individuals, but as an organization. The question of wet or dry is being voted on in many cities tomorrow and indications are that the dries are going to have the best of the argument in unexpected places.

When making your selection tomorrow do not forget to cast a ballot for Judge Rosenberry for the supreme court. His re-election is on a purely non-partisan basis and is urged simply upon the grounds that he is the best man for office. A vote for Rosenberry is a vote for keeping the supreme court out of politics.

The mere fact that the British have been able to hold their present line with slight advances against the overwhelming foe and that the French are still doing the fighting lists is more than encouraging to say the least. Better news always follows the worst.

Time to think of that "War Garden" now that our election, both city and state, are so nearly out of the way. Figure it out and help save the food supply by becoming a producer as well as a consumer.

Have you decided upon your city ticket yet? It is so long since you had such a list to choose from you may forget some of them unless you write them down before going to the polling place.

The military superiority of the United States up to date appears to consist mostly of ability to pile up a mountain of munitions on the New York docks waiting for some ship to take them over.

The Germans think they are very kind to the Russians, as they give them their free and untrammelled choice whether they would prefer to perish by the sword or starve to death.

Too bad that Vice-president Marshall did not have made two or three more speeches for Davies and thus swell Lenroot's majority.

The usual army of insect pests will fight for the Kaiser on our farms and gardens this year. When you kill a bug, you help kill a Hun.

The practical result of our big airplane program to date is that we've had the publicity while Germany has got the planes.

It takes a very alert mind for the group to demonstrate his superiority to the Small Boy on April 1st.

APRIL FOOL.

An empty egg shell in my cup, My knife and fork secured with threat.

So when I try to take them up, I almost tear the table spread, And laughter from a roguish pack And eyes that are a joy to see Whenever April 1st comes back They plot to make a fool of me.

I shall be asked when I arise, "What is the matter with my nose, And feigning innocent surprise, Shall ask the mother to disclose The nature of the blemish there, And then that flock in childish glee Will scamper madly down the stair And about their 'April Fool' at me."

"You've dropped your handkerchief!" they'll cry, And promptly I shall turn to look, Or maybe one of them will spy An inkspot on my favorite book, And they will struggle to restrain Their mirth when angry I shall be; Today that crew will make it plain It's fun to make a fool of me.

Yet little will they guess today How much of joy is mine to claim Though it is but a game they play. Always I hope to play the game. I would not mar their childish fun, With any wise and stern decree, And so I pray till life is done, Their charms will make a fool of me.

German Spy Sentenced. Rhineland, April 1.—Interment for the remainder of the war is the punishment meted out to William Toepfer, arrested here last December on the charge of disloyal conduct and also for being a German spy. It is understood that Toepfer will be taken to a detention camp in Georgia. Had Good Time. Lost $400. Superior, April 1.—C. F. Ziegler of International Falls, Minn., came here for a good time. He had it and is now trying to recover $400 the good time cost because of the disappearance of the bright-eyed young woman who agreed to help him while away a few lonesome hours.

OUR FIRST HERO

Dedicated to the memory of Corp. Frank Hill of Co. "M" With the flag that he loved draped over him, Our first hero was laid to rest; While the fairest of blooms shed their petals in grief, And made fair the place where our boy will rest. God knows best; but it is hard to say For he went away so happy and gay, One of the first to answer his country's call. And one of the first to fall. But we—we are glad that we could shed a tear As we stood humbly at his bier, And thanked him in our hearts for the life he gave. That the flag of Democracy might wave Nation wide—and that free might be our depressed nations from tyrann. Then sleep sweetly our dear boy of Co. "M" Till the final "call" comes for one of the bravest of men. Mary E. McBain.

EXEMPTIONS.

If you had $9 flat on a 100 to 1 shot and he ran second, you don't have to pay any income tax. If your wife's sister and nine children spent the winter with you and it cost you $25 a week to keep them, you don't have to pay any income tax on that $25 a week. If you invested $800 in mining stock and the company went bloozy, you don't have to pay any income tax on that $800.

The worst case we know of is that of the man whose wife eloped just before he made out his income tax schedule and he couldn't claim the $2,000 exemption on her. Congratulations are in order for Schalk of the White Sox. The stork called recently, bringing a bouncing baby girl.

Given under my hand and seal of Rock County at the Court House in the City of Janesville, Wisconsin, this 29th day of March, 1918.

HOWARD W. LEE, County Clerk.

POLITICAL ANNOUNCEMENT. Written and publication authorized by the Janesville Dry Committee and to be paid for by them at the rate of 50c per inch.

SAY! Political Wiseacres Say Janesville Is Going Dry

The Farmer Has Asked For It.

The Drys Proclaim It!
Neutrals Believe It!
The Wets Look It!

The Laboring Man
Has Declared
For It.

Go Over the Top With the Water Wagon!

THEY HAD ON THE UNIFORM!

Did you see the drunken soldiers on our streets yesterday? If one was your boy, wouldn't you think Janesville ought to protect him from the saloon while he prepares to fight our battles for us?

Vote Early!

"Don't Rock the Boat!" "Rock the Ship of State."

The "Wets" say don't rock the boat in war-time, but they're rocking the "ship of state." Men, money, food, fuel in staggering amounts are still slipping off into the beer vat. Stop it! They're rocking the ship of state. Vote Dry!

THEY WILL BE LOOKING FOR DUMPING GROUNDS

Beloit and Edgerton are expected to go dry tomorrow. Beloit is classed as among the certainties. They will be looking for dumping grounds. Shut the gates against their cast-offs. VOTE DRY!

We are out to answer the roll call of growing, prosperous, democratic cities, loyal to our government and the boys in uniform. Win the first line trenches.

VOTE DRY!

Read Here What a Few of Rock County's Farmers Say About the Menace of the Liquor Traffic:

This should prove that farmers are interested in a Dry Town and will not stop trading in a city that is on the Dry List as some would have us believe. Ask any farmer what he thinks of the effect of the saloon on the farm labor situation.

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN:

We, the undersigned farmers residing in Rock County, being convinced that the liquor traffic is an appalling injury to humanity and a menace to good government, do hereby appeal to the voters of Janesville and especially to its business men to use their votes and influence for a dry city in the present local campaign.

Those of us in the country, and we believe it is the overwhelming sentiment there, would much prefer to do business in a dry town, and are desirous of enjoying Janesville's educational and social advantages free from the contamination of the saloon.

In these critical times when our government is appealing to the people for the conservation of food stuffs, we deplore that conditions make it seem expedient to allow vast quantities to be worse than wasted in the manufacture of alcoholic liquors.

Cap'n Warren's Wards

By JOSEPH P. LINCOLN.

Copyright, 1911, D. Appleton & Co.

"Caroline Warren, is that the reason you sent Jim away? Did you tell him that? Did you tell him you wouldn't marry him on account of me?"

"No, of course I did not," indignantly. "I told him I said I must not think of marriage; it was impossible. And it is. You know it is, Uncle Eliza."

"I don't know any such thing. If you want to make me happy, Caroline, you couldn't find a better way than to be Jim Pearson's wife. And you would be happy, too, you said so."

"But I am not thinking of happiness. It is my duty to you and to my own self respect. And not only that, but to Steve. Some one must provide a home for him."

"But you won't have to leave him. Steve's future's all fixed. I've provided for Steve."

"What do you mean?"

"What I say," the captain was very much excited and for once completely off his guard. "I've had plans for Steve all along. He's doing just fine in that broker's office, learning the trade. When he's out of college I'm going to turn over your dad's seat on the stock exchange to him. Not give it to him, you know—not right off—but let him try, and then, if he makes a good fist at it, he'll have it permanent. I ain't told him, and I don't want you to, but it's what I've planned for him, and—"

"Wait! Wait, uncle, please! The stock exchange seat? Father's seat? I don't see—I don't understand."

"Yes, yes," eagerly. "Your pa's seat. I've meant it for Steve. There's been chances enough to sell it, but I wouldn't do that. 'Twas for him, Caroline, and he's got to have it."

"But I don't see how—why, I thought—"

By the light from the doorway he saw that she was gazing at him with a strange expression. She looked as if she was about to ask another question. He waited, but she did not ask it.

The stock exchange seat had been a part of her father's estate, a part of her own and Steve's inheritance. How could Captain Warren have retained such a costly part of the forfeited estate in his possession? For it was in his possession he was going to give it to her brother when the latter left college. Who was this mysterious man her father had defrauded? She had never wished to know before; now she did. And the more she pondered the more plausible her suspicion became.

CHAPTER XVIII.

The Stock Exchange Seat.

NOVEMBER weather on Cape Cod is what Captain Eliza described as "considerable chancey."

"The fellow that can guess it two days ahead of time," he declared, "is waste his talents. He could make a livin' prophesying most anything, even the market price of cranberries." When Caroline, Sylvester and the captain reached South Denbore after what seemed to the two unused to the leisurely winter schedule of the railroad, an innumerable journey from Fall River, the girl thought she had never seen a more gloomy sky or a more forbidding scene.

But she kept her feelings hidden on her uncle's account. The captain was probably the happiest individual in the state of Massachusetts that morning. He hailed the train's approach to Sandwich as the approach to a desirable room.

Vinol Makes Good Blood

Positive—Convincing Proof.

Many so-called remedies for anaemia are only so in name. Their makers are afraid to prove their claims by telling what their medicines contain. The only way to be honest with the people is to let them know what they are paying for. Here is the Vinol formula. When the doctor knows what a medicine contains it ceases to be a "patent" medicine.

It contains Liver and Beef Extracts, Iron and Magnesium, Potassium, Iodine and Ammonium Citrate, Bone and Skin Extracts, and other valuable ingredients.

Any doctor will tell you that the ingredients of Vinol, as named above, will enrich the blood and banish anaemia and create strength. When the blood is pure and rich and red, the body is strong and robust.

You can prove this at our expense because your money will be returned if Vinol does not improve your health.

South Drug Co., Janesville, Vinol is sold in Broadway by W. J. Smith and at the best drug store in every town and city in the country.

QUICK RELIEF FROM CONSTIPATION

Get Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets

That is the joyful cry of thousands since Dr. Edwards produced Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel.

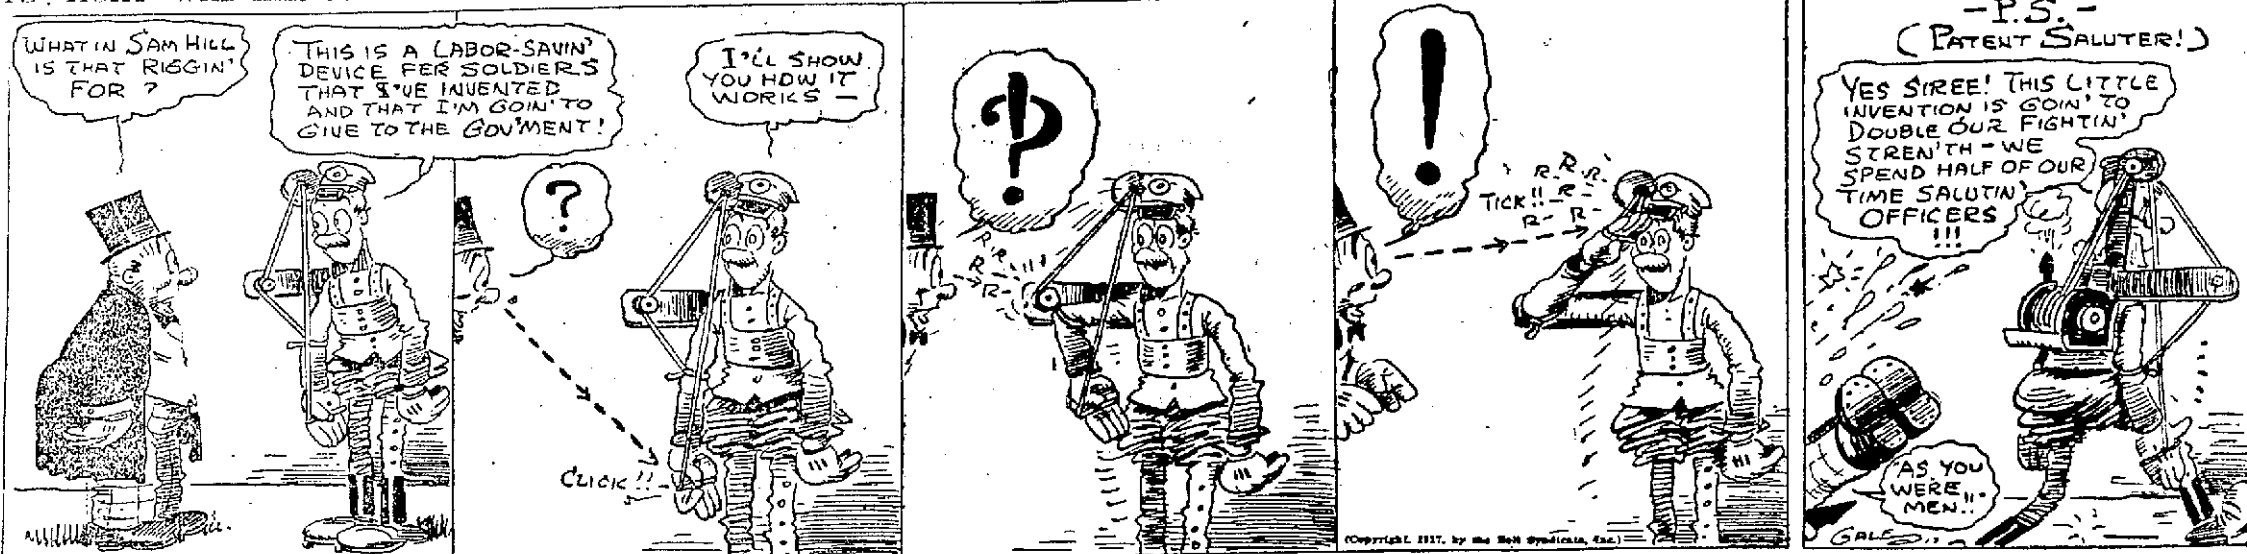

Dr. Edwards, a practicing physician for 17 years and calomel's old-time enemy, discovered the formula for Olive Tablets while treating patients for chronic constipation and torpid livers.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets do not contain calomel, but a healing, soothing vegetable laxative.

No gripping is the "keynote" of these little sugar-coated, olive-colored tablets. They cause the bowels and liver to act normally. They never force them to unnatural action.

If you have a "dark brown mouth"—a bad breath—a dull, tired feeling—sick headache—torpid liver and are constipated, you'll find quick, sure and only pleasant results from one or two little Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets at bedtime. Thousands take one or two every night just to keep right. Try them. 10c and 25c per box. All druggists.

PRIVATE "TIGHT" WAD HAS CORNS ON HIS RIGHT EYEBROW FROM SALUTING!

ty, the promised land, and from that station on excitedly pointed out familiar landmarks and bits of scenery and buildings with the gusto and enthusiasm of a schoolboy.

At Denbore he pointed out Pete Shattuck's livery stable, where the horse and buggy came from which had been the means of transporting Graves and himself to South Denbore.

"See," he cried. "See that feller holdin' up the corner of the depot with his back, the one that's so broad in the beam he has to draw in his breath afore he can button his coat. That's Pete. You'd think he was too sleepy to care whether 'twas today or next week, wouldn't you? Well, if you was a summer boarder and wanted to hire a team you'd find Pete was awake and got up early. If a ten cent piece fell off the shelf in the middle of the night he'd hear it, though I've known him to sleep while the minister's barn burned down. The parson had been preachin' against horse tradin'. Maybe that sermon was responsible for some of the morphine influence."

Sylvester was enjoying himself hugely. Captain Eliza's exuberant comments were great fun for him. "This is what I came for," he confided to Caroline. "I don't care if it rains or snows. I could sit and listen to your uncle for a year and never tire. He's a wonder."

Dan, the captain's hired man, met them with the carriage at the station, and Miss Baker met them at the door of the Warren home. The exterior of the big, old fashioned, rambling house was inviting and homelike in spite of the gloomy weather, and Caroline cheered up a bit when they turned in at the gate. Five minutes of Miss Abigail's society and all gloom disappeared. One could not be gloomy where Miss Abbie was. Her smile of welcome was so broad that, as her employer said, "it took in all outdoor and some of Punkbush Neck," a place which he listened to add, "was forgot durn'd creation and has sort of happened of itself since."

Abbie conducted Caroline to her room—old fashioned, like the rest of the house, but cozy, warm and cheery—and, after helping in the removal of her wraps, seized her by both hands and took a long look at her face.

"You'll excuse my bein' so familiar on short acquaintance, dearie," she said, "but I've heard so much about you that I feel as if I knew you like own folks. And you are own folks, ain't you? Course you are! Every one of Eliza's letters have had four pages of you to one of anything else. I begun to think New York was nobbin' but you and a whole lot of tea story houses. I declare, you're ainner prettier than he said. May I kiss you? I'd like to."

She did, and they were friends at once.

The house and buildings were spotless in paint and whitewash; the yard was raked clean of every dead leaf and twig; the whole establishment was so neat that Caroline remarked upon it.

"It looks as if it had been scoured," she said.

"Um-hm," observed her uncle, with a gratified nod; "that's Abbie. She hates dirt worse than she does laziness, and that ain't sayin' a little. I tell her she'd sunbath on the weather vane if she could climb up to it. As 'tis, she stays below and superintends Dan while he does it."

Miss Baker had planned that her young guest should sit in state, with folded hands, in the parlor. She seemed to consider that the proper conduct for a former member of New York's best society. But Caroline refused to sit in the parlor and be "company." She insisted upon helping. Miss Baker protested and declared there was nothing on earth to be done, but her guest insisted that if there was not she herself must sit. As Abbie would have as soon thought of attending church without wearing her jet earrings as she would of sitting down before dinner, she gave in after awhile and permitted Caroline to help in arranging the table.

"Why, you do fast rate!" she exclaimed in surprise. "You know where everything ought to go, just as if you'd been settin' table all your life. And you ain't, because Eliza wrote you used to keep hired help, two or three of 'em, all the time."

Caroline laughed.

"I've been studying housekeeping for almost a year," she said.

"And they teach that—at school?" she demanded. "And take money for it? And call it science? My land! I guess I was brought up in a scientific household, then. I was the only girl in the family, and mother died when I was ten years old."

After dinner she consented to sit for a time, though not until she had donned her Sunday best, earrings and all. Captain Eliza and Sylvester sat with them, and the big fireplace in the sitting room blazed and roared as it had not since its owner left for his long sojourn in the city.

Caroline's mind was busy with the suspicion which her uncle's words concerning his future plans for Steve had aroused. She had thought of little else since she heard them. The captain did not mention the subject again.

Possibly on reflection he decided that he had already said too much. And she asked no more questions. She determined not to question him—yet. She must think first and then ask some one else—Sylvester.

Her opportunity came the following morning, the day before Thanksgiving. After breakfast Captain Eliza went downtown to call on some acquaintances.

After the captain had gone Sylvester sat down before the fire in the sitting room to read a Boston newspaper. As he sat there Caroline entered and closed the door behind her. Miss Abigail was in the kitchen busy with preparations for the morrow's plum pudding.

The girl took the chair next that occupied by the lawyer. He put down his paper and turned to her.

"Mr. Sylvester," she said, "I wish you would tell me something about the value of a seat on the stock exchange. What is the price of one?"

The lawyer looked at her in surprise. "The value of a seat on the stock exchange?" he repeated.

"Yes. What does it cost to buy one?"

He hesitated, wondering why she should be interested in that subject.

"And you are our own folks, aint you?"

Captain Eliza had not told him a word of the interview following Pearson's last visit.

"Well," he replied, smiling, "they're pretty expensive, I'm afraid, Caroline. I think the last sale was at a figure between $50,000 and $100,000."

"Indeed! Was father's seat worth as much as that?"

"But," with a sigh, "that, I suppose, went with the rest of the estate."

"Yes."

"Into the hands of the man who took it all?"

"Yes; the same hands," with a sly smile at his own private joke.

"Then how does it happen that my uncle has it in his possession?"

The lawyer smiled no more. He turned in his chair and gazed quickly and keenly at the young lady beside him. And her gaze was just as keen as his own.

"Why! Has he?"

"Yes. And I think you know he has, Mr. Sylvester. I know it because he told me so himself. Didn't you know it?"

"I—I cannot answer these questions," he declared. "They involve professional secrets and—"

"I don't see that this is a secret. My uncle has already told me. What I could not understand was how he obtained the seat from the man to whom it was given as a part of father's debt. Do you know how he obtained it?"

"Er—well—er—probably an arrangement was made. I cannot go into details because—well, for obvious reasons. You must excuse me, Caroline."

"One moment more," she said, "and one more question. Mr. Sylvester, who is this mysterious person—this stockholder whom father defrauded, this person who wishes his name kept a secret, but who does such queer things? Who is he?"

Dinner Stories

The near-sighted humorist happened to bump into a pedestrian who had a grouchy. The pedestrian grew pugnacious. "Take off them glasses and I'll punch your face for you," he cried.

"But my dear sir," said the humorist calmly, "it is quite against the custom, you know. Who ever heard of ordering the glasses before the punch was served?"

The young man and the girl were standing outside the front door, having a final chat. He was leaning against the door-post, talking in low tones. Presently the young lady looked round to discover her father in the doorway, clad in a dressing gown.

"Why, father, what in the world is the matter?"

"John," said the father, addressing himself to the young man, "you know I have never complained about your staying late, and I'm not going to complain of that now, but for goodness' sake stop leaning against the bell-push and let the rest of the family get some sleep."

They were on their honeymoon. He had brought a boat and had taken her out to show her how well could handle it, putting her to test the sheet, puff of wind came, and he shouted in an uncertain tone. "Let go the sheet!" No response. Then, again, "Let go that sheet, quick!" Still no movement.

A few minutes later, when both were clinging to the bottom of the upturned boat, he said:

"Why didn't you let go that sheet when I told you to, dear?"

"I would have," sobbed the bride. "If you had not been so rough about it, if you ought to speak more kindly to your wife."

Heart and Home Problems

BY ELIZABETH THOMPSON
LETTERS MAY BE ADDRESSED TO MRS. THOMPSON, IN CARE OF THE GAZETTE

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a married woman and I have three children. I have been so happy with my husband and a few months ago there is a young woman in our neighborhood who has taken a great liking to him and she even comes over to our house when he is home and talks to him and does not seem to care for him. I am putting my babies to bed and she stays while I wash the supper dishes and she doesn't even offer to help. She and my husband are interested in music. We have a player piano and she has a good time with that one. I don't like it. I have my husband because when we are alone he talks to me and asks me if I am happy and if there is anything he can do to make me happier. I have not said anything about the other girl, but because I don't want him to know how jealous I am, but I break my heart to see them together. After working hard all day taking care of my home and my babies I want to enjoy my husband just a little in the evening. Sometimes I get desperate. What would you advise me to do?

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I have a daughter twenty years old and she makes her father and me very unhappy because she thinks only of herself. She works downtown and she pays her board but not much, and the rest she spends on clothes that she expects me to wash and iron for her all the time. She is cross and mean to her sisters and tells all of us just what she has in mind. If we don't do it she is crosser than ever. I have become discouraged. Will you please tell me what I can do to make my daughter more like other girls. She is also cross about boys and now that most of them have gone to war she is unhappy and complains because she has to go with young boys. What shall I do with her?

Refuse to be a slave to your daughter. When she insists upon your doing tasks that you know are unreasonable, simply don't do them. If she will be very cross for a while, but when she learns that you mean what you say and are not going to be driven by her any longer she will be more reasonable in her demands. Since your daughter pays her board she is entitled to a little consideration. She should have some of her clothes washed and ironed, but of course she should not be allowed to put too many garments in the wash.

HEALTH TALKS

BY WILLIAM BRADY, M. D.
LETTERS MAY BE ADDRESSED TO DR. BRADY, IN CARE OF THE GAZETTE

What Climate for "Catarrh"?

In a personal letter from the head of the health department of one of the South Atlantic States appears this passage:

"We are constantly besieged with inquiries about this line. In fact I have before me now a letter from a gentleman of New York, making inquiry in regard to the climate of this State and the climate of other places for the cure of catarrh of the head."

People with various chronic diseases of the nose, throat and bronchial tubes masquerading as "catarrh" in the North imagine they can get well if they move South. People in the East harbor the notion that they will get rid of the "catarrh" if they move West. Western people constantly suggest this department for suggestions about the treatment of "catarrh," and many Southern people think that in any climate but theirs "catarrh" may be gotten rid of.

People living in valleys blame their suppositions "catarrh" upon the dampness of the atmosphere. People living in places of altitude charge their "catarrh" upon the dryness of the air. People living in the most equable climate available account for the great prevalence of "catarrh" troubles by pointing to the difference in the night air, the humidity, the humidity, and round and round in a vicious circle.

The most foolishly venture a human being can undertake is to change climate for health on his own or some well-meaning friend's advice. Too often it proves just the opposite—changes health, such as he has, for disease. In fact, it always turns out that the fellow who "had the same trouble" gives the most costly and worthless advice. Especially is this true of so-called "catarrh" for the obvious reason that no such disease condition exists. "Catarrh" is something which covers ignorance of the actual present. All sorts of disease masquerade under this all-embracing title of "catarrh." No one knows what the patient has wrong with his nose, throat or bronchial tubes until a thorough examination has been made and the cause of the trouble determined. This includes, of course, a chest examination with the patient stripped to the waist, and an inspection of the throat, nose and chest with the aid of a headlight and speculum to dilate the nostrils. Without such examination the camouflage may serve time, but it never helps the patient to recover his health.

Climate for catarrh? The gentleman from New York State might as well have asked the health department head whether the Southern climate would be helpful to a person with a bad case of imaginary kidney trouble deduced from that tired feeling and a lazy posture backache.

Climate? It can't be bought. Please see me the directions for the Kurell cure and tell me how you can be helped to reduce my blood pressure and also my weight, if possible. (M. M.)

ANSWER: Like fresh air and exercise and good morals, the Kurell method can't be bought. It is a red herring. It would be helpful to a person with a high stomach—but it costs a stamped addressed envelope for the full data. Would you like your advice about TB. Is it curable? If the patient is still under the influence of the disease, it would be worth while for him to try and find a cure for it? What climate would be best for him?

ANSWER: Most every victim of tuberculosis, as soon as he knows enough to know he has tuberculosis begins to think he knows enough to be his own doctor, and has a great fool for a patient. Tuberculosis will always be arrested if the patient is properly treated. It would be fatal for the patient to make his own experiment with treatment or climate. He must select his physician and then do nothing except follow his directions. Tuberculosis is an open air anywhere is curative, with prolonged rest in bed and the proper care.

AN APPEAL TO THE FASHION GODS.

Was there ever in the world such a waste of money as the fashion gods?

Little fashion book of blouses came to me the other day. On each page was a blouse and each blouse, instead of being numbered, was labeled with its own name. A delectable little blouse was Ann, a rather pretty one was Claudia, a boyish tail-coat affair was Laurie, a most Frenchy creation was Manette, a most dainty little blouse was Bab. And so forth and so on.

Even Hair Cuts Have Names. The next day I took up a newspaper and saw hair cuts for boys and girls. Each hair cut had its own name. I had a name of its own. One was Joffre, another American Boy, another Riah Riah (I can't quite remember a boy's selecting that) and so on down the line.

Pick up any fashion magazine and chances through the fashion pages or the advertisements and you will find one article after another assuming names de plume. A pair of boots.

Why Name Out Houses. Is it not queer that, in all this orgy of naming, one thing which is used to be the style to name new goes without any such distinction.

There was a time when no one thought of building a beach house without naming it. That was part of the fun. Names for town houses were never so common in this country as I gather from literature and my traveled friends, they are abroad. And lately it has only been the less sophisticated people who have named their beach houses. It is more nonchalant and superior, I believe to leave them unnamed. Just as it is supposed to be better taste to leave your program off your limousine (so I am told by friends who know) I am afraid I should have or catarrh, down to sore throat, bronchitis or deep chest cold. Just apply VapoRub well over the throat and chest, covering with a warm flannel cloth. Leave the covering loose around the neck so the vapors, released by the body heat, may be freely inhaled. The next morning the head is clear, phlegm loosened and sickness gone. One rubbing with VapoRub usually relieves croup in 15 minutes and an application at bedtime prevents a night attack.

Colds are easiest to stop at the beginning. "Nip them in the bud" by keeping plenty of fresh air in the bedroom and applying VapoRub freely at the first sign of trouble. Your druggist will sell you a 25c jar with the privilege of a month's trial.

A Talk to Mothers About Croup and Cold Troubles

The New Treatment With Fresh Air and Antiseptic Vapors, that Makes Internal "Dosing," Flannel Jackets, etc., Unnecessary.

Local Druggists Are Offering It on 30 Days' Trial—No Cost If You Are Not Delighted with the Results.

All mothers are "home doctors" when it comes to treating the croup and cold troubles that children are heir to. They know that growing children need outdoor exercise and that, with outdoor exercise, colds are bound to come. They know, too, that these colds should not be neglected, and yet constant "dosing" disturbs the delicate stomachs of children.

The answer to this problem is the external "vapor" treatment, Vick's VapoRub, for all the many forms of cold troubles, from head colds, asthma, or catarrh, down to sore throat, bronchitis or deep chest cold. Just apply VapoRub well over the throat and chest, covering with a warm flannel cloth. Leave the covering loose around the neck so the vapors, released by the body heat, may be freely inhaled. The next morning the head is clear, phlegm loosened and sickness gone. One rubbing with VapoRub usually relieves croup in 15 minutes and an application at bedtime prevents a night attack.

EVERYDAY ETIQUETTE

At her second marriage a lady wears pearls gray or lavender, not white, and is very unostentatiously dressed. BRIDE: At a church wedding, the families of the bride and bridegroom leave their places first, following the wedding party; and no one else should move until these persons have started toward the entrance. After the bride and groom have departed, all the other guests may leave regardless of order or importance.

HARRY: I sympathize with you, I do assure you. Women of the elderly persons for whom others must step back, and extend "waiting courtesies" are often exasperating in lagging as soon as the polite gentleman or younger person drops behind to allow him or him to go through a doorway, or to pass another person first. That is just the time when consideration should meet courtesy, and the person in front should move briskly, so as not to delay the one behind.

Wouldn't It Be Fun To Have A Talk With Them. I think this is an omission. I should like to ask the gods of fashion (wherever they live) to change this decree. If everything else is to have a name, let us name our Olympic creatures, and should certainly get up an appeal to them on that and several other subjects.

PRUNE PARFAIT

This is a delicious dessert and it is excellent to serve now that we are trying to conserve the sugar supply. Soak half a pound of prunes over night. Cook until tender and discard the stones and cut the fruit in small pieces. Cook three-quarters of a cupful of brown sugar with one-third of a cupful of prune juice and the juice of half a lemon to the soft gel stage, or 235 degrees Fahrenheit, pour in a fine stream upon the stiffly whipped white of one egg and continue to beat until cool.

Add prunes, fold in one cupful of double cream whipped solid and pour into a mold with a water-tight cover. Burry in ice and rock salt for four hours before serving.

Odors from boiling ham, cabbage, onions, etc., may be prevented by putting a piece of charcoal into the kettle.

To clean enameled tubs easily moisten a cupful of table salt with turpentine and rub the tub with this. Boiling starch is much improved by the addition of salt or a little gum arabic dissolved.

Her Great Adventure

by Zoe Beckley

REVOLT. For some seconds Claire could not realize that it was of her Mrs. Wetherell was speaking. She had felt loneliness, more than her share. But she felt like an outcast. She had known poverty; but never disgrace. She had experienced fear, embarrassment, shyness; but never shame. She had no reason to feel these heaviest of punishments to an honest soul. She had been weak a thousand times but never in respects that should bring disgrace upon her. Yet here was a woman who had known her but a few minutes and without hesitation branded her to the wall! For what? Did she deserve Claire a chance to defend herself?

As a mother will fight savagely for her young, so a girl will become a savage in protection of her good name—or are they both the same passion? Claire, after the first moment of paralysis, dressed with a fury of speed and ran downstairs. Her startled hostess turned as she rushed into the room and was contented to see Claire's face was white and tense. Her eyes snapped, her fingers clenched and unclenched nervously.

"I heard you!" she cried passionately, hurling her words at every person who dared to move. "I heard you!" she cried passionately, hurling her words at every person who dared to move. Fables of the Friendly Forest

by David

Well, after Billy Bunny and good Uncle Lucky woke up in the morning for they had slept all night in the Lucky-Mobile as I told you in the last story, they ate their breakfast and then they started off and by and by they had an adventure.

Uncle Lucky stopped the automobile and he and Billy Bunny got out to make the acquaintance of this happy Frog King. And weren't they surprised to find that he was the brother of Uncle Bullfrog, who lived in the Old Mill Pond. He had heard all about the two rabbits and was delighted to see them.

"Sit down on the bank and I'll get you a watercress sandwich and some pond-jelly milk," cried the Frog King, and he waved a bullwhisk wand up and down and whistled through his fingers, and then a dozen tadpoles swam up. And then they swam off again and when they came back they had watercress sandwiches and pond-jelly milk enough to go around and some besides. I give to the Lucky-Mobile, only automobiles don't drink anything but gasoline, so they gave what was left to a nice friendly duck who happened to pass by just then.

And then Uncle Lucky took off his stoppie hat and bowed to the Frog King and Billy Bunny took a chocolate éclair out of his knapsack and said, "Give this to your Queen with my compliments." Whistled the Frog King so he fell off his log throne into the water with a terrific splash.

And if the lawn mower doesn't run over your white poodle dog and cut off his hair, I'll tell you tomorrow another story about Billy Bunny and Uncle Lucky.

COLLEGE GIRLS TO WORK ON THE FARMS

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Boston, Apr. 1.—Hundreds of New England college girls eager to help Uncle Sam win the war, are organizing agricultural units to enter in cultivating and harvesting the record crops that are planned for this section of the country this year. The movement is in charge of the Farm Association in co-operation with the state board of agriculture.

At Wellesley College squads of young women, twenty to a squad, will see through the crops on an adjacent farm, from planting to harvesting time. Miss Catherine Hughes, daughter of Charles E. Hughes, Republican candidate for president in the last national election, is a member of one squad. The land which the Wellesley girls will till comprises about seventy acres and is located near the college. From the volunteers for farm work a number of young women will be selected to maintain one of the smaller buildings on the college grounds where they and the tillers of the soil will live during the summer.

Smith College has organized a large farm unit, under the direction of Miss Josephine A. Clarke, head librarian. Fifty undergraduate and alumnæ of the three classes will make up the unit. It will be named after the "Hill Top." Miss Clarke's fifty-acre place at Chesterfield, where the crops will be raised.

Radcliffe College too will have a farm unit. A committee of student volunteers, of which Miss Francis Ring is chairman, is working out organization plans. These include the leasing of a nearby farm. In preparation for the summer's work many of the Radcliffe students are raising a free course in vegetable raising. Other young women students in other New England institutions of learning are making ready to lead the advance guard for similar work to the farms, many of them to take the places of men called to the colors. All these prospective girl-farmers are taking emergency war courses on agriculture.

POCOHONTAS.

"Say, Pa, I just want for some cigars for you, so I think you might answer me just one more question. I forgot my history book."

"Now see here, Thomas! Ask it!" exclaimed Pa. "I have to get to be a bloomin' history book for the rest of my unnatural life? Every time your Ma forgets something, I'm the one who has to remember it."

"That will do for a while, William. Answer little Tommy's question!" quietly commanded Mrs. Askitt, who was using the downy and the red velvet while she unwound a skein of khaki wool.

"Spiel away then," said Pa, and he laid down the spinning page of the Evening Breeze obediently.

"Who was Pocohontas?" asked Tommy.

"Pocohontas? Pocohontas? Are you sure he's the fellow you mean?" asked Pa, trying to gain a little time.

"Yep," said Tommy.

"Well, let me see—oh, yes. Imagine the fellow being a statue for a natural thing like that. Pocohontas was an Indian chief," said Pa. "I know that much," laughed Tommy.

"Yes, but I'm telling you the rest of it," said Pa. "When Sir Walter Raleigh wanted to marry Pocohontas, sweet and lovely daughter, Kipling, Giggles, old Pocohontas got into a fix. He was called a fool, and he cracked Walter on the bean with a copper kettle."

"Didn't we white fellows do anything to him?" asked Tommy indignantly.

"You betcha. We jumped on our branches and chased the whole tribe right to the edge of the center on Mount Quake and one by one we pushed them in!" exclaimed Pa.

"That was a hot one!" admired Tommy.

"It was," sighed Pa. "Them was the days." And he sighed nostalgically and settled back in his chair for his evening's enjoyment of the Evening Breeze.

Chinese Plant Statuettes.

Chinese gardeners sometimes plant statuettes of tiny men firmly in pots, just like real plants, and then train live evergreens to grow up over the statuettes. The vines thus form kind of robe for the statuette men, their white faces and hands protruding from the green leaves.

EVERYONE URGED TO USE OLEOMARGARINE

TO release for use abroad those fats which best stand shipment, American households are asked to use alternatives. Last year we had to ship to our Allies thirteen times as much butter and dairy products as our average yearly shipment for the three preceding years. Hence, the enormously increased need for us all to use more Oleomargarine on our tables and in our kitchens. Therefore, to the patriotic housewife, the important question is, "How shall I know which brands are best?" Solve the problem by using POLITICAL ANNOUNCEMENT. Written and publication authorized by the Janesville Liquor Dealers' Association and to be paid for by their treasurer at the rate of 50c per inch.

Mr. Taxpayer:

We wish to call your attention to a few facts.

Before the zone system was established in Janesville the assessed valuation of the property occupied by saloons outside of the proposed zone was $58,000.00. After the zone was fixed the property was assessed at $43,800.00—a difference of $14,200.00, which has been and must be paid by tax payers other than those who own the property. Figuring on the same basis there will be a depreciation of property values in the business district of at least $150,000.00 in case Janesville votes for "No License." These questions naturally occur to the tax payer and particularly the one who owns a little home.

What businesses will fill the forty vacant stores?

Who will pay the additional taxes which will be made necessary when the taxable value of the business property of Janesville is depreciated and the city treasury does not receive $20,500.00 license money each year.

What effect would it have on business if Janesville should go dry and towns adjoining the city limits should remain wet, as they will, as no vote is to be taken?

Will prohibition prohibit in Janesville when it does not in other dry territory? The evidence recently taken in Rockford showed that one driver on the east side of that city delivered beer regularly by the case to over 1000 houses so you see that if you are financially able you may buy your liquor by the case but, if not, you must do without it.

These are strenuous times. Every man needs all he has and all he may legitimately make to support himself, his family and contribute to the various war funds. No one complains of a lack of patriotism on the part of the saloon keepers. They have done their share. If anyone doubts this let him ask the various campaign managers. In addition to their liberality the saloon keepers in Janesville have paid to the United States government, during the last few months, approximately $78,000.00 in excess revenue taxes on their stocks. Some of them were obliged to borrow money to do this. It doesn't seem that it would be fair or patriotic to put these men out of business with their stocks on hand upon which they have paid the government tax.

You should keep in mind that if the President of the United States deems it wise or necessary for the conservation of food stuffs he may order the discontinuance of the manufacture of beer and ale, it would seem therefore that you should await that time. This is a period when harmony should prevail and not discord. There should not be disruption of business or the depreciation of property. It may seem a little thing in the minds of some to wreck business and unsettle property values and throw a large number of men out of employment but we know you will appreciate the facts and cast your vote For License at the polls tomorrow.

Madison, Wisconsin, after one year's experience as a Dry Town, recently had a petition circulated by the business men containing the names of over 4,000 signers to bring this matter to a vote so that the town could be again in the Wet column.
